IRS e-file for Forms 1120 and 1120-S

The IRS has designed an electronic filing process for Forms 1120 and 1120-S under IRS e-file. Electronic filing for Forms 1120 and 1120-S launched in February 2004 includes file and pay capabilities. This product has 100 relative forms and schedules available. Form 7004, Application for Automatic Extension of Time to File Corporation Income Tax Return and three other forms were added for Tax Year 2004. For a complete list of forms and schedules refer to Publication 4163, Modernized e-File Information for Authorized IRS e-file Providers of Forms 1120/1120-S. This program provides the ability to e-file complex, consolidated returns, including attachments and multiple subsidiaries and foreign entities. It uses Extensible Markup Language (XML) technology, that allows e-filed returns to be processed as they are received rather than in batches. Filers will receive a prompt electronic acknowledgement. The system also includes an integrated payment option. Corporations can e-file a balance due return and, at the same time, authorize an electronic funds transfer.
